Roumanians Drive Huns Back in Region of Dobrudja

GERMANS MAKING STUBBORN FIGHT IN SOMME

London, Nov. 6.—After a week of fighting attempts by the British and more of doubt as to whether the French to gain further ground, the Roumanians in the Dobrudja region of Roumania, where the forces of the Teutonic allies had been warning of a possible attack, have now taken the offensive, pushing back the Huns in the St. Pierre-Vaast wood. The report that the Roumanians had taken the offensive, pushing back the Huns in the St. Pierre-Vaast wood, has been taken up by the British and the French. The British had previously won at the battle of the Somme, and the French had won at the battle of the Marne. The Roumanians have now taken the offensive, pushing back the Huns in the St. Pierre-Vaast wood. The British had previously won at the battle of the Somme, and the French had won at the battle of the Marne. It is said the pouch contained important messages to the military attaches at Sofia and Constantinople and also details of the Suez Canal defences. In addition, the dispatches say, it contained compromising letters from the Greek King and Queen to the German Emperor.

Strong Hun Garrison Surrendered in Body to French Troops

THE BATTLE ON SUNDAY IN WHICH FRENCH MADE PROGRESS WAS FOUGHT WITHOUT AID OF AEROPLANES

With the French Army on the Somme, Sunday, Nov. 5, via Chantilly (from staff correspondent of the Associated Press).—The battle position surrendered in a body, with their officers, more than five hundred running at a racing pace into the French lines, and for two miles and a half to the rear, accompanied by only half a dozen French guards. It was a strange sight when they ran the gauntlet of the German barrage fire. St. Pierre-Vaast wood is more than two kilometres square with many positions entailing each other, and proved a most difficult problem for the French. But French infantry finally rushed the place and held it with slight losses. The battle continued until the night.

On sale at Lyric Theatre

"Kick In"
Announcement is made today by the management of the Lyric Theatre that W. B. Sherman's production of "Kick In" will be presented here on Monday, November 13th.
"Kick In" is a sensational drama from the pen of Willard Mack. It is a companion play to "Within The Law." It is even regarded by the most critics on the continent to be better than "Within The Law." In fact, "Kick In" on its first appearance in New York set the city wild. It has no other play enjoyed the reception given this great masterpiece. A splendid cast of all star players is portending to be a most substantial Sherman guarantee.
The plot is a series of climaxes. It deals with the underworld of New York and exposes the police methods of "bouding" those who are endeavoring to correct themselves from lives of crime. It is the play of the hour in America today, and Red Deer players can look forward to a big season when the company plays here. All the equipment necessary for the big production, carried by the company, will be used here.

THOMAS HELMBOLT ACQUITTED

Both Accused and His Wife Say Whiteside Had Come to Telephone Office Armed with Revolver

In her evidence Thursday at Coroner's Court, Mrs. Helmbolt swore to improper relations with Sgt. Whiteside on several occasions in July and August, 1916.

Stettler, Nov. 1--Thomas Helmbolt stands charged in the supreme court before Mr. Justice Ives of the murder of his friend, Sergeant Frank Whiteside, M.P.P., at Coroner's Court on September 24, the trial opening here on Wednesday morning. As the result of morning, afternoon and evening sessions, much of the preliminary evidence was recorded, but it is not expected that the case will reach the jury before Friday night.

Due to the prominence of the deceased, and accused in the Coroner's Court district, unusual interest is being taken in the trial and many were unable to obtain admission to the court room on Wednesday. J. W. Hoffmann, Edmonton, assisted by George Auxier, Castor, is conducting the case for the crown, while Helmbolt is defended by A. C. Mackay, K.C., Edmonton, and E. C. Locke, Coroner.

Miss Grace McFetheridge, night telephone operator, at Coroner's Court, told of being relieved from duty on the night of the tragedy at the request of accused, who was formerly manager of the telephone exchange. Miss McFetheridge, chief operator at the exchange, told of being relieved from duty at 10 p.m. Sunday by Helmbolt, who told her he was taking Miss McFetheridge's place for the night.

Some Startling Evidence

Stanley A. Fawcett, manager of the Castor Advance, one of the papers owned by deceased, offered his startling testimony, as he was in the near vicinity of the telephone office when the tragedy occurred. Witness said he heard the first shot fired and was one of the three citizens who dashed into the telephone office and discovered Whiteside, bleeding badly, lying on the floor. His first attempt to enter the exchange was fruitless as the door was locked, but upon securing the assistance of Coroner Meeres, the trio returned to the scene of the tragedy and found accused standing in the doorway. Whiteside, lying propped up against a cupboard in a corner of the room, said "Is that you Captain? That man entered me into the room and shot me in both arms."

Heard Woman's Screams

Fawcett stated that deceased also screamed. Captain Meeres took Helmbolt in custody and to beware of him as he had a loaded gun. Witness admitted under cross examination that accused had a loaded revolver in his pocket, and that he saw a doctor before the tragedy was discovered. Under further cross examination by Mr. Mackay, witness said he heard continued screaming and shouting by a woman while he was running from the back door of the Review office to the telephone exchange and also heard a heavy thud as if some one had fallen upon the floor.

Witness, who entered the room at the same time as Meeres and Fawcett, corroborated their evidence as to finding of accused and deceased and stated Helmbolt handed a revolver to Captain Meeres, remarking, "Here's a revolver and there is a shot gun, too, if you want it."

Plan of Defence

The battle to secure the introduction of the statement by the late Sgt. Whiteside, admitted at the preliminary, that he would make every effort to see Helmbolt safe, overcame with the battalion, resulted in a ruling by His Lordship Justice Ives against the defence. Along the same lines efforts were made by the defence to prove that Sgt. Whiteside, M.P.P., knew that he would not be sent overseas with the battalion because of a slight over-exaggeration of his illness. In the cross-examination of Dr. Little, one of the two physicians who performed the post-mortem, the evidence showed that the deceased had a leaky, squinty enlarged heart, three times the normal size.

Later Captain Wilfrid Curtis, M.O. 187th battalion, testified that he had examined the deceased when he first came to Red Deer, after having been passed by a medical examiner. The examination was made at the request of Lieut. Col. Robinson, and he had told the deceased, as well as Lieut. Col. Robinson, that he was in no condition to go overseas, and he would never be passed by the examining board, and that there was no use of him expecting to go. However, he had told the deceased, as well as the regiment while it was in Canada to help in recruiting.

The crown on cross-examination of this witness tried to indicate that since that time he had been given to understand that he would get overseas all right, but Captain Curtis was positive that no one could have given the deceased this assurance, not even Sir Sam Hughes.

The deceased's ante-mortem statement was read as follows:

"I Frank Whiteside, in fear of immediate death and believing I am about to die, make this solemn statement and declare: On Sunday night, September 24, 1916, I was called upon at my residence in the presence of my wife by Thos. E. Helmbolt at about 10:30 o'clock. He asked if I would mind stepping down to his house for a minute.

"I had just removed my shoes, but said 'Certainly, step inside until I get my shoes on.' He said he had left the telephone office without any charge and would have to hurry back so he preceded me down the street. As soon as I was prepared I went along. I called at the hotel on my way down as I wanted to see Mr. Fawcett, manager of the Castor

Advance. He was not in, but I was informed that he had taken quarters with Mr. Wimmer in the Balmoral Cafe. I secured the keys of the telephone office from Mr. Wimmer and I gained entrance to that office by the rear door as the front door key did not work satisfactorily. I told Fawcett to remain in the office near the back door as it was evident that Helmbolt was looking for me, and that if he heard anything unusual to come at once into the telephone office.

"I then went direct to Helmbolt's and was admitted by the front door and proceeded him through the parlour into the dining room where he asked me to take a seat. I sat opposite to him and he asked me the following questions: 'I had my idea in mind but it might be wrong. My idea was based on the fact that you were going to give me one chance. You may have the option of blowing your own brains out or I am going to do it for you. I want you to tell me right now I am wise to do everything you have been doing, every other that has passed between you and Mrs. Helmbolt. Is it in my possession and unless you sign a confession setting out your intentions I will blow your brains out before you leave this room. Mrs. Helmbolt has made a complete confession and has signed it and I have the names of people in this town and Calgary setting forth both your infamy and Mrs. Helmbolt's.'

"In the meantime he had drawn a revolver from his pants pocket and pointing it directly at my head said, 'I will just give you one minute to sign this confession or I will blow your brains out.' I said 'Helmbolt you are in a strong position. With that gun in your hand you would be a poor shot not to hit me at that distance, and as for signing a confession such as you suggest no man under heaven can make me do that. You may kill me if you wish, which I have no doubt you intend to do, but don't run away with the idea that you can bluff Frank Whiteside. Furthermore, I absolutely refuse to discuss my affairs privately related to my friends and relatives he goes on.

"Now, that the evenings are getting shorter and darker, he more than to write letters as there is nothing to do outside, so stay in barracks most of the time. It is dark here at 10 o'clock so you can see by the time that we get cleaned up after parade and get supper we have very little time till dark, and as there is no use going to work, we spend our evenings in camp. We have two fire places in our hut and lately have had them going. That's one thing I'm going to have when I get home a fireplace. Good, but they're nice and give a lot of heat too, and also they don't take up much room.

"By the looks of this over yonder at present, I doubt whether the war will be over this fall. Everybody who has heard from the front lately by now that it all depends on the weather. If the good weather continues well that winter looked by clouds and dark weather, we'll have to wait till spring before they finish them. We have them on the go now and if everything stays like this I'll have them licked in a little while.

"I guess we will soon be over there but we should worry. We'll have it easy now that winter is approaching. Would like to spend Christmas here, but if we have to go, will be willing, because that is what we came over for.

Slipped on the Floor

"I knew the man to be a coward and I realized there was no sense in parading. My only hope was to beat bodily and make my exit through the telephone office, which I attempted to do. I passed him successfully, but unfortunately I slipped and fell to the floor. As I arose I placed the stove between myself and him and it was here the first shot was fired. This was fired from a 32 revolver. I don't know whether it was a 32 or not as I had risen from the floor I seized upon a piece of fire wood holding it up in front of me to protect my body. I then rushed through the door into the fitting room and closed it. Almost immediately it was wrenched open by my hand and I was shot in the chest. I staggered to the rear door and tried to open it but could not do so. I then received a second shot in the left arm which hurt me very much. I then stepped into the room to the telephone and called Fred McNeil. I don't know whether McNeil arrived that night or not. I know other citizens arrived including Dr. Brookman and I was given temporary aid and taken to the hospital. He fired three shots at me together, one of which didn't take effect. I was not armed at all.

"Two weeks before this he wanted me to sign his name to a letter but I refused. This was Thursday, September 13, or thereabouts.

"I knew the first shot was fired from a revolver, but could not tell at the time what kind of gun the other two shots were fired from.

"The Whiteside declaration George F. Auxier, John McKelvie, John S. Brockman.

Letters from The Front

Gordon McIlwraith writes--

"Everybody here at present considering the late wet and cold weather that we are having at present. Bill hasn't got over his cold yet. My lungs have developed wonderfully and are getting better every day with the hard hours' physical drill we have.

I saw Jack Oliver last night but didn't have a chance to speak to him as I was on picket. He looks thin but otherwise he is alright. Am going down to see him to-morrow night.

Do you remember me speaking of a bugler in the 89th at Red Deer by the name of Craik, a little fair-haired fellow. He and I used to hang around together. Well, he is in Folkestone hospital with a very serious wound. A bullet ricocheted off someone's head and entered above the knee making a fearful gash. A wound of that sort is twice as bad as a clean hole because the bullet when it goes off something strikes the body full side on and instead of a clean wound, gashes and makes a mess of it. Craik is a very brave fellow more in this war and will be sent home as soon as possible.

"Bob" Pearson is to go back to the front again as he was lightly wounded in the back and hand. Paul Steele is back and hasn't been to the trenches yet. He was sent to the hospital the day before the rest of the boys went into the trenches and came out the day after. Pretty tough luck, eh?

Like our new work fine, very interesting to us. Making great advances in the work, at least the Corporal says so. The people seem to have the idea that machine gunners are bad and dangerous work, but I fail to see it. Everybody says that machine gun is the best job over there.

After acknowledging the receipt of a number of parcels from friends and relatives he goes on--

"Now, that the evenings are getting shorter and darker, he more than to write letters as there is nothing to do outside, so stay in barracks most of the time. It is dark here at 10 o'clock so you can see by the time that we get cleaned up after parade and get supper we have very little time till dark, and as there is no use going to work, we spend our evenings in camp. We have two fire places in our hut and lately have had them going. That's one thing I'm going to have when I get home a fireplace. Good, but they're nice and give a lot of heat too, and also they don't take up much room.

"By the looks of this over yonder at present, I doubt whether the war will be over this fall. Everybody who has heard from the front lately by now that it all depends on the weather. If the good weather continues well that winter looked by clouds and dark weather, we'll have to wait till spring before they finish them. We have them on the go now and if everything stays like this I'll have them licked in a little while.

"I guess we will soon be over there but we should worry. We'll have it easy now that winter is approaching. Would like to spend Christmas here, but if we have to go, will be willing, because that is what we came over for.

Slipped on the Floor

"I knew the man to be a coward and I realized there was no sense in parading. My only hope was to beat bodily and make my exit through the telephone office, which I attempted to do. I passed him successfully, but unfortunately I slipped and fell to the floor. As I arose I placed the stove between myself and him and it was here the first shot was fired. This was fired from a 32 revolver. I don't know whether it was a 32 or not as I had risen from the floor I seized upon a piece of fire wood holding it up in front of me to protect my body. I then rushed through the door into the fitting room and closed it. Almost immediately it was wrenched open by my hand and I was shot in the chest. I staggered to the rear door and tried to open it but could not do so. I then received a second shot in the left arm which hurt me very much. I then stepped into the room to the telephone and called Fred McNeil. I don't know whether McNeil arrived that night or not. I know other citizens arrived including Dr. Brookman and I was given temporary aid and taken to the hospital. He fired three shots at me together, one of which didn't take effect. I was not armed at all.

"Two weeks before this he wanted me to sign his name to a letter but I refused. This was Thursday, September 13, or thereabouts.

"I knew the first shot was fired from a revolver, but could not tell at the time what kind of gun the other two shots were fired from.

Ontario Government Pleased With P.C. Decision

370 Schools Affected, 175 of Which Have Not Obeyed the Law

Toronto, Nov. 3.—Members of the Ontario government, including the premier and his ministers, are elated over the privy council's decision that regulation No. 17 of the Ontario school law is legal.

"We have not yet learned the full text of the judgment," said Premier Hearst, "but what little has reached us indicates that we have won a splendid victory. It means that the big fight on regulation No. 17 is over; that we have won that fight, and that all that is left for the French people to do is to submit. That is all they can do, as I see it. They have carried their case to the highest possible court and have received a judgment. I presume they will now submit and accept regulation No. 17 as the law."

LEGISLATION UPHELD

"In reference to the second case, regarding the appointment of the commission for Ottawa, we cannot tell yet on what ground the case was lost," Premier Hearst said. "I have no doubt but that it was on some minor technicality—one that can be cured by legislation. It is likely that some legislation covering points up, which the commission was declared ultra vires will be passed at the next session. The fact remains that the legislation is upheld and that there must be a remedy provided for carrying it out."

Hon. G. H. Ferguson, who was acting minister of education during important periods in the bilingual fight, said:

"It is a splendid victory for provincial rights. We are more than satisfied."

370 SCHOOLS AFFECTED

"I think the schools will now comply with the law in view of the decision. This government is not going to injure the French people, but the law must be obeyed. There are about 370 schools affected, and 175 of them have not been obeying the law. I sincerely hope that this friction will end and that they will settle down to obey the regulations."

Hon. R. A. Pyne, regular minister of education, declared that the privy council's decision meant that the jurisdiction of the department regarding educational affairs was supreme in the province. "It means that we have every right to control the school system of Ontario," said he. "The act regarding the commission was merely defective, and we can set that right. The most important point is that regulation No. 17 is declared valid."

15 Mills is Tax Rate in North Red Deer

At a special meeting held on Tuesday evening, the council of the village of North Red Deer, appointed Alder H. Allen, of Edmonton, as assessor for the remainder of the year. The secretary-treasurer, J. Edgar Welton, was instructed to attend the convention of the Union of Alberta Municipalities to be held at Edmonton on the 8th and 9th inst., and endeavor to obtain, by means of the Union, certain revisions to the Village Act.

Owing to the reduction in the amount of the village assessment caused chiefly by the dropping of the West half of Section 17 which was found to be outside the limits and the exemption of the lands for which the village now holds title under tax enforcement proceedings, the assessment this year amounts to $156,200. The sum required for village purposes this year being $8,843.00, the Council passed the resolution authorizing the tax rate to be 15 mills. The above sum of $8,843.00 included the adjustment of taxes made with the Great West Lumber Co. Ltd. on the portion of their land which had been assessed since the incorporation of the village, but which is part of the West half of Sec. 17 and outside the village limits; the amount of taxes lost to the village by the forfeiture of the lands recently sold, and sum to provide for unpaid taxes. Full particulars may be had at the secretary's office.

Decision Given By Privy Council in Bi-Lingual Schools

London, Nov. 2.—(Canadian Associated Press).—Judgment in the Ontario bilingual controversy was given to-day by the privy council. The highest court in the realm decided the Ontario department of education, regulation 17, which the Ottawa separate school board claimed was ultra vires of the legislature, to be within the power of the Ontario parliament, therefore legal.

But on the other hand, the lords of the privy council defined as illegal the appointment by the Ontario government, under special act of the provincial parliament, of a commission in which were vested the powers of recalcitrant trustees of the Ottawa separate school board. The legislature, according to the privy council judgment, had not the power to pass such an act.

BOTH SIDES CLAIM VICTORY

Ottawa, Nov. 2.—Both parties of the bilingual controversy are claiming a victory through the decision of the privy council. Positive opinions on the decision are not being given out until the full text of the decision is received.

The bilingualists consider that they have gained their case, as they maintain that the full strength of their opposition was directed against the separate school commission, which they always contended, was an illegally constituted body. They are waiting for the interpretation of the Maclellan judgment before hazarding an opinion, but cling to the hope that the judgment will have qualifications which favor them.

Bandits Steal $7,000 From Bank at Okotoks

Calgary, November 4.—Holding up at their revolver points the members of the staff who slept on the premises, and then gagging and binding him, two masked highwaymen blew the safe of the Merchants Bank of Canada at Okotoks, thirty miles south of Calgary, at 2 o'clock this morning and escaped, presumably in a motor car, with the cash contents, amounting to something in the neighborhood of $7,000.

Before committing the robbery the bandits cut the telephone and telegraph wires at each end of the town and it was not until a messenger arrived from Okotoks by motor car that the authorities were notified of the crime.

As far as the mounted police were able to ascertain at an early hour today the burglary was very similar to that recently perpetrated at Caron, Saskatchewan; in fact, the mode of operation seems to have been exactly the same.

A message from Okotoks says there was a strange motor car with two men in it in the vicinity of the town yesterday and it alleged that they were the two who robbed the bank.

ELECTION TALK

The Albertan would try to fasten the talk of an election upon the Conservatives, presumably to justify their getting candidates into the field. It is the case the Liberals in a number of the constituencies are also busy. Mr. Galbraith in his paper is bidding for the support of delegates to nominate him in place of Mr. Welliver at the Liberal Convention to be held here on the 14th inst.

Other ridings are bringing out Liberal candidates. It is a well-known fact that Liberal organizers, leaders, and civil servants are all busy working the Liberal machine methods all over the province. In the face of this, the Albertan takes the Leader of the Opposition to task for attending a Convention. The Albertan however, feels no one but himself. Every one who is active knows an early election was all staged. Literature all ready, prepared to spring an election irrespective of the fact that an election now would roll over 30,000 of our men at the front of their franchise. But what does the Liberal government care so long as they are returned to power to carry on their nefarious trafficking in railway guarantees for every five years.

Even Hon. Frank Oliver upon his return from Ottawa gave an interview to the News-Telegram stating "he understood when he left Ottawa that all arrangements were made for a provincial election."

Why the postponement? Did the Government find the sentiment strong against a gross injustice to our gallant soldiers, or was it they found out the women were not anxious to exercise their franchise at the expense of their husbands and sons who are fighting our battles?

Neither the Liberal press nor the Government can hawk the people by such deception.

NO COALITION

A virtuous Liberal newspaper protest against any thought of coalition, says the Toronto News, it declares that for Liberals to enter a Cabinet which would include Sir Sam Hughes and Hon. Robert Rogers is an impossibility. One can sympathize with these zealous regenerators. The mere thought of bringing the sainted Pugsley into association with Sir Sam or Mr. Rogers is disgusting to all well-doing people. And there are other objections. It is suspected that among Conservatives there are still sceptical and cold-hearted people who distrust the Kaiser. They think that he is a principal instead of an agent. They do not believe that he was weakly led into the conflict which has won Europe with graves and filled the earth with mourning. But in thinking of Germany we are assured by the Liberal leader that "love is better than hate and faith is better than doubt." If he who reverses the teaching in its application to Sir Sam Hughes and Mr. Rogers? "The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself: God, I thank Thee, that I am not as other men are."

WHAT DID SIR WILFRID LAURIER MEAN?

It has been frequently said that few men in politics anywhere have rivalled Sir Wilfrid Laurier in demagogic skill and subtlety of racial and religious appeal. Does this explain a remarkable passage in the speech delivered by the Liberal leader to his French-Canadian compatriots in Montreal a few days ago? In the course of his address Sir Wilfrid recalled that Britain was vainly asked by France to go to her help in the Franco-Prussian war, and he expressed the view that it was a want of generosity on the part of Great Britain to refuse this aid. He said: "In 1870, when M. Thiers appealed to England for help against France, England did not respond. England at that time was not generous, but if in this war England made the same error, we would have been the first to accuse her." Sir Wilfrid Laurier cannot have forgotten the facts of the Franco-Prussian war, and besides he has read history. He knows that it would have been almost impossible for the British Government in 1870 to defend Canada in the war. Britain was not the ally of France. No small country had invaded whose neutrality Britain and the invaders alike were pledged to maintain. The duplicity of Bismarck was not known until years afterwards. If the future could have been known the temptation to help would have been strong, but as matters stood then it cannot be said by Sir Wilfrid Laurier or anybody else that Britain was not generous. And why, in any event, the need to recall the story now? Sir Wilfrid was supposed to be making an appeal for recruits. Did he think that the French-Canadian that in 1870 France appealed to England for aid and was refused?

AN OUTSIDE VIEW.

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier, former Premier of Canada, and now leader of the Opposition, is not an Imperialist. While professing the greatest loyalty to the British flag, there is no doubt that as a French-Canadian his nationalism overshadows his Imperialism. His policies from 1896, when he first took office, until his resignation, have been national rather than Imperial. He apparently does not sympathize with anti-British utterances as that Quebec Nationalist, Henri Bourassa, and his lieutenant, Armand Lavigne, but there are indications that he believes that Canada's destiny should be along the lines laid down by those two and others who would have the Dominion a nation with as little to do with London as possible, short of actual severance of the traditional national allegiance to which monarchy which holds the sceptre but does not rule.

Specific acts of Sir Wilfrid's which indicate this policy include his reluctance to enter the Boer war until public sentiment compelled him to take some action, his opposition in the Imperial conferences held in London during his regime to anything which would tend toward closer relations, trade and otherwise, with the British Empire, his contribution of three battleships to the British navy four years ago.

At London, Ontario, last week Sir Wilfrid made a partisan speech in which he declared that he is a pacifist, and warned his hearers against the danger of militarism, in such language that the Conservative papers declared that Britain's present state of militarism is the worst kind of militarism in Sir Wilfrid's opinion, and how much of a following he would have."—Buffalo Express.

LIBERALS MISREPRESENTING FACTS.

One of the Liberal election devices is the misrepresentation of the system under which supplies of various kinds are purchased for the Canadian troops in Canada and Great Britain. It is obviously an election device, because Liberal politicians and newspapers are more or less openly engaged in seeking to bring about an election and to accumulate political capital by devious methods in the hope of being able to use it if the effort to bring about an appeal to the people is successful. In this connection the statements of Liberal politicians and Liberal newspapers contrast significantly with the announcement by the Minister of Militia in Toronto as to the position of the Government.

From the Opposition comes the statement that there is no two-fold extension of the parliamentary term, and that an election is in preparation.

The Government comes the definite statement that Parliament will be called to meet in January and that in the meantime an election is not being and will not be considered.

In the face of this latter announcement the Liberal campaign continues, and one of the means employed is the effort to create discontent in regard to the purchase of war supplies. For example, the charge is made that the manufacturers in Great Britain are getting the benefit of the huge market for supplies created by the presence of thousands of Canadian troops in England. This charge is, of course, nowhere near the truth. Some expenditure in Great Britain is unquestionably necessary to make the Canadian troops able to be without those every day needs which they ought to have, and of which no relative or friend of the men in uniform would deprive them. But for every dollar spent in Great Britain on the authority of the Canadian Government, there is spent in Canada from five to ten dollars by the Imperial Government. In other words the balance of this is in favor of Canada by from five hundred to one thousand per cent.

This has been brought about, it has been brought about in the face of a very serious obstacle, namely the adverse exchange situation which threatened for a time to curtail purchases by the Imperial Government on this side of the water. That difficulty was overcome by Sir Thomas White in the establishment of dollar credits, in other words, by advances of money to be spent in Canada by the Imperial Government in the purchase of supplies. Canada has become the Imperial Government's banker in regard to these purchases, to an amount of two hundred million dollars in the early stages of the war. The Imperial treasury offered to lend to Canada for war purposes. For only a very limited time was advantage taken of that offer. Canada is now, and has been for many months, carrying her own war burdens and financing Imperial purchases here as well. Nor is that all. The revenues this year will enable the Minister of Finance to reduce the war debt principal by more than fifty millions.

Liberal politicians and newspapers find it convenient and think it honest to overlook these things.

SASKATCHEWAN'S NEW PREMIER.

A respectable figurehead has been found for the Saskatchewan government in the person of M. M. Smith, M.P. for Regina. In the list of his qualifications for the provincial premiership, emphasis is laid upon the statement that he "is a man with unblemished reputation." No doubt he is, but does he possess the force of character necessary to clean up the mess into which Saskatchewan politics has fallen? He has certainly begun badly, by consenting to retain in office the men who are responsible for the troubles which have characterized the administration of the province during the past two or three years.

Mr. Smith is known to have accepted the position with extreme reluctance. A year ago he would have been glad to get it, but now he has taken it on the condition that he will not be a president and honorable man change his mind. He has yielded now, presumably from a sense of party loyalty without fully understanding the strength of the undesirable elements which are sheltering themselves behind him and relying upon his personal standing in the community to pull them through.

In one respect he has done what the better Liberal party has refused to do. He has taken into his cabinet Mr. C. A. Downing as provincial treasurer. There is no explanation as to why he has not taken into his cabinet Mr. McKenna, of Saskatoon, who was generally expected to become one of his colleagues, unless it be that room could get no more room without getting rid of one of the old gang who have brought such disaster to the party and the province.

In the other hand he has retained every one of the former ministry. Hon. J. A. Calder, who presided over the highways department while the "boes" were looting the treasury right under his nose, keeps his portfolio. So also does Hon. A. P. McNabb, the morality and honesty of whose conduct caused a difference of opinion in the royal commission. Also does Hon. W. F. A. Turgeon, attorney-general and provincial secretary, who has the reputation of being a close runner-up with the heathen Chinese for ways that are dark and for tricks that are in vogue.

In short, the government of Saskatchewan has changed its front but not its character. Whether the people can be deceived by this veneer of respectability is a question which only a general election can answer. We take for granted that the new government will be the people at the earliest opportunity. After what has occurred in Saskatchewan, it is unthinkable that he should attempt to carry on a government without securing the endorsement of the electorate.

(Calgary News Telegram)

tives the "shake" and made his escape on Friday night. Perhaps, after hearing the story Scott had to tell I how he "plugged" the vote to enable the right candidate to win, the powers-that-be of the new B.C. government came to the conclusion that it would be much better to have Scott escape than to have his disclosures go to the public. But he is a wonder that the Liberal party has won so often in Alberta. It has had the assistance of a fellow Liberal, Scott, who is smooth enough to slide through the fingers of hard-burnt men?

Judging by the article published in this column by F. W. Galbraith, editor of the Advocate, there is trouble in the Liberal Camp. This is a free country and a man has a right to do as he sees fit provided he comes within the law. Mr. Galbraith is a very handsome man and takes a great picture, and of course this will add greatly to his popularity. But it is just a little tough on E. Welliver, the old war horse who, the Conservatives think at least, put up a fight equal to any man in the province, and really made his arguments all up and down the line, and it is not our fault. Go to it gentlemen, and the old boy take the hindmost.

From F. W. GALBRAITH To the Men and Women in Red Deer Provincial Constituency Who Incline To The Liberal Cause:

Friends:—

My name will be submitted as a candidate to the convention of Liberal delegates to be held here in Red Deer on Thursday, November 16, at 2 p.m. for the purpose of choosing a Liberal candidate to contest this constituency on behalf of the Liberal Government in the next Provincial election.

I was nominated at the Red Deer Liberal Convention of 1911, by Mr. John T. Moore, carried the support of the large majority of the delegates, and became the Liberal candidate. At the Liberal convention previous to the 1913 election, I was again nominated, but withdrew in favor of Mr. Welliver, then Mayor of Red Deer.

I have, through the Advocate and in other channels, worked faithfully to build up this district, and to promote the best interests of all the people. I have, through the Advocate and on the platform, sought to advance the progressive policies advocated by the Liberal Party, and the Liberal governments and Liberal party in this province, and have loyally stood by the candidates chosen by the several Liberal conventions to this end.

In wider fields than in this constituency I have given service. I have been honored with the Presidency of the Union of Alberta Municipalities, and with the Presidency of the Alberta and Eastern British Columbia Association. I was chosen as Commissioner for Red Deer (unincorporated) constituency in 1911. I have been Mayor of Red Deer, and am now on the City Council.

This country and this constituency have been passing, and is passing, through some serious financial experience which affect seriously the health and safety of its people. This experience is largely due to over-speculation in land, and in the result to the great trade combinations of the world, which we are passing, with the tremendous sacrifices involved in the war, to bring upon us changes which we cannot yet forecast. The passing of the Liquor Act and the extension of the Provincial franchise to women will also have a strong tendency to direct the attention of public men to the social and economic well-being of the average citizen by a fairer distribution of the production of labor and a fairer adjustment of the burdens of the State. In the enlarged and more serious view of practical duties to the brotherhood which is coming upon us in this province, not a few Liberals believe that this constituency should be represented at Edmonton by a moderate man in thorough sympathy with the social and economic measures which must have consideration in the coming years by a man whose sole interest lies in small productive cooperative enterprises, rather than that Red Deer constituency should continue the succession of members which it has had from its organization — men engaged in speculative schemes which have not brought the gain to this constituency and to this province that was promised, and schemes which we now know to be fallacious so far as the improvement of the conditions of living of the average citizen is concerned. We have not yet learned that speculation is the enemy of production. I hope to have opportunity at the Convention to set before the delegates the results of a little thinking I have been giving to some conditions which this province is experiencing — not as a means for all our ills, by means, but as suggested lines of advance, the discussion of which might bring about some practical results.

I believe that my long experience and training in newspaper, municipal and political life has given me knowledge and address to worthily represent your cause at the Convention, and, if elected, to labor intelligently and faithfully in that position for

THE RIGHTS OF FARMERS TO SLAUGHTER ANIMALS AND PEDDLE MEAT

A report is going the rounds in some districts that farmers not holding butchers' licenses are prohibited from slaughtering their animals and peddling the meat, and section 13a of the amendments to The Stock Inspection Act, 1916, is quoted as the authority. This section reads as follows:—

"13a. It shall not be lawful to offer for sale in any city or town in the province by other than a licensed butcher unless the hide taken from the carcass from which such beef was obtained and each quarter of such carcass have been inspected by an inspector of stock or a brand reader, and such hide and each quarter have been stamped by the stock inspector or brand reader with an official stamp authorized by the Minister."

The section refers to the sale of "beef" only, so that it is clear that the Act does not apply to the sale of mutton or pork by any person at any place. As to the sale of beef, it applies only when it is sold in an incorporated city or town. Presumably the restriction was put on to prevent beef from stolen animals being sold in large places where detection would be difficult.

If a farmer or other person who does not hold a butcher's license desires to sell beef in an incorporated city or town he must, before offering it for sale, have the hide of the animal and each quarter of the beef inspected and stamped by a stock inspector or a brand reader.

Stettler, Alta., Nov. 2.—Evidence by Mrs. Thos. Helmbolt and the accused, Thos. Helmbolt, the man who is accused of the murder of Sergeant Frank Whiteside, M.P.P., in the telephone office at Coronation on the night of Sunday, September 24th, brought the case of the defence to a close at a late hour tonight. It is understood that the Crown will examine one or two witnesses in the morning, one of whom will be Mrs. Whiteside, wife of the deceased, and then after the address to the jury by the Crown and defence, the jury will be charged by Justice Ives.

The evidence of today was startling. The defence is going to rely largely upon a charge of self-defence. According to the testimony of both Mr. and Mrs. Helmbolt, who are the only two living witnesses of the happenings in that telephone room on the night of September 24, Whiteside had come there armed with a revolver. He had drawn the revolver and had pointed it at Mrs. Helmbolt, who was sitting at the desk. Whiteside then backed up into the other room. Mrs. Helmbolt had fled there when the door was first drawn. Helmbolt slammed the door and held it. He heard his wife screaming in the room where Whiteside was. He went and got the sawed off shot gun, which he had abbreviated two days previous, when he had intended to commit suicide. He dashed back to the room and saw Whiteside taking aim on him with the revolver, and he (Helmbolt) fired the first shot with the old shot gun. Whiteside advanced again and Helmbolt fired the second one.

That this is the real case of the defence brought out only today. Prior to that the realms of letters and poems read to the court and the intimate relations between Mrs. Helmbolt and the late Mr. Whiteside had formed a case which apparently was being built up on the Lawtrent Law plea.

Stettler, Nov. 2.—"We thought we loved each other," was the only explanation offered by Mrs. Eugenie Helmbolt, wife of Thomas Helmbolt, accused of the murder of Frank Whiteside, M.P.P., in explaining the relations between herself and the deceased. Under the witness stand last night she told the story in a clear, soft voice, slowly weighing each word with no effort of a theatrical nature. The frail little woman was unable to stand throughout the testimony, and at times she almost completely broke down under the strain, but she bravely held out until Mr. Justice Ives declared the case adjourned for the night, to resume at 10 o'clock this morning.

LETTERS AND POEMS.

Mrs. Helmbolt was called upon to identify letters and poems which had been interchanged between the deceased, Frank Whiteside, and herself, and which had fallen into the possession of the accused. It was the discovery of some of these letters that had directly led to the shooting affray. Letters were written daily—sometimes several times a day, when it was convenient. The letter-writing started last spring, when the late Mr. Whiteside was attending the session of parliament at Edmonton. The letter-writing became more frequent, and was done with less caution until the shooting-day morning prior to the shooting. Mrs. Helmbolt was in Calgary on that day, and she wrote to Mr. Whiteside at Sarcee Camp. This letter was one of those which fell into the hands of her husband, and which was produced in court. Throughout these letters Mrs. Helmbolt was known as "Lily," and the late Mr. Whiteside as "Boy."

Poetry played a larger share in the expression of the love between the two than did prose. Whiteside started the love lyrics, and Mrs. Helmbolt tried her hand at it, and unprejudiced listeners in the court room last night agreed that she had made the better list of it. The first instance of the late Mr. Whiteside's poetical ability was introduced in court, and was entitled "My Lily's Prayer." The witness stated that she had typed the poem at Mr. Whiteside's request. It was his composition, and he wanted it to carry it in his inside pocket during the session of parliament. Another poem which was entered as an exhibit was entitled, "From Boy to Lily." This, too, was the composition of Mr. Whiteside. It was a sequel to the composition entitled, "My Lily's Prayer." Mrs. Helmbolt's first poetical effort was given to the late Mr. Whiteside on July 7th, the day before he went to Sarcee Camp.

The poem started: Half forgotten, half forgotten, is that day of long ago, The day of your mysterious coming, the coming we did not then know.

The last verse of the five in the lyrics is: "As the lass of that long-ago day, Wakens to see in those eyes dreams of joy."

Tears of gentleness and tenderness and the wondrous spirit of Boy."

SAYS WHITESIDE FIRED GUN. That the late Frank Whiteside came to the telephone office Sunday night of the tragedy, being invited there by Helmbolt in order to get the copies of the letters which had passed between Mrs. Helmbolt and Whiteside, and that he had brandished a revolver, pointed it at the accused, and then fired it, was the principal evidence given by Mrs. Helmbolt at this morning's session of the criminal court.

Mrs. Helmbolt told of the plans made for getting the accused out of the army, in order that he might accompany Mrs. Helmbolt to the States, where they were going to start all over again, and of her denial to the accused of any improper relations with the deceased until the few moments before Whiteside arrived at the telephone office. Helmbolt had told his wife that Whiteside was coming down to the telephone office to deliver the letters to him. It was only then that she admitted the secret meetings in Calgary and of Whiteside's visits to the Helmbolt's home at night while Helmbolt was away. In fact, she was still telling him when Whiteside's footsteps were heard approaching the door. She had made the confession because she thought Whiteside was bringing the letters and she knew that the letters would tell it all.

SOMETHING WRONG.

Preparations were continued on Sunday for departure to the States on the following Tuesday. That night her husband had said to her that he was going over to see Whiteside, as he guessed Whiteside had changed his mind about coming to see him. He was going over to Whiteside to ask him for the letters, he told her. She tried to persuade him not to go but he insisted. He was gone long and when he came back he said that Whiteside was coming over and was bringing the letters with him. "I told him that the letters would show him plainly enough that there had been something wrong between us," said the witness. She had started to tell the story of the details when she heard Whiteside coming. The witness was sitting at the switchboard of the telephone exchange when she heard Whiteside enter the dining room.

"I suppose you know what I want to talk about," witness quoted Helmbolt as saying to Whiteside. Helmbolt replied that he thought it must be about some letters which Helmbolt had stolen from his grip at camp. Helmbolt replied that Whiteside had robbed him of more than that. He had entered his home and robbed him of his wife's affections, etc. Helmbolt said that Whiteside had been trying to say anything as he knew the whole miserable mess. Whiteside denied what Helmbolt accused him of doing and refused to discuss it unless Mrs. Helmbolt was in the room. "She does not want to see you," witness quoted Helmbolt as saying. "However, I will call her into the room about this."

She went to the room and verified her husband's statement that he knew everything about the sitting room's words, witness testified. "I am willing to keep this thing quiet. There is just one thing I want you to do, and that is to deliver to me or to my wife every one of those letters."

"You will never get those letters if they are mine," Whiteside is said to have replied.

"You will give them, or I will publish everything and I will make your name a stench," the witness is said to have replied. "Hold on, you are going too far," Helmbolt said.

I then saw, said witness, that Whiteside had a gun in his hand. He raised it and pointed in the direction of Helmbolt. I ran out of the room and into the telephone office, screaming, said the witness, and I fell down between the stove and the desk. Helmbolt shot at me. I was lying on the floor. I raised myself up and saw Mr. Whiteside standing in front of me. He had the revolver in his hand. I heard steps coming from the dining room, and I thought it was Tom. I saw Whiteside raising his revolver and I called out to him to look out. He then grabbed a chair and held it up in front of Whiteside's gun. I heard a shot, and then the next thing I remember Tom was standing over me and saying, "Are you hurt?" Tom helped me up stairs out of the room, and as I went up I saw Whiteside crouched upon the floor.

Cross examination of the witness by the Crown was mainly devoted to the relations existing between Whiteside and Mrs. Helmbolt. A pile of letters written by Mrs. Helmbolt to Whiteside were admitted in evidence, and extracts read from them. Questioning by the Crown as to the contents of that night did not bring out any new evidence, the witness being absolutely certain of practically every point.

A pile of letters were produced in court, and all of them were from Mrs. Helmbolt to Whiteside. Counsel for the accused demanded that the other letters which were from the deceased to Mrs. Helmbolt be produced and this resulted in a favorable ruling from the court in favor of the defendant.

Stettler, Nov. 3.—At four-thirty this afternoon Mr. Justice Ives finished his charge to the jury, and the court adjourned until two o'clock. The entire morning was taken up by the address to the jury by the Hon. A. G. McKay. This was followed by a carefully worked charge to the jury by Mr. Justice Ives. The judge's summing up was apparently in favor of acquittal, although he concluded with the statement that the final verdict was in the hands of the jury alone.

The indication given last night that the Crown might call a few more witnesses this morning was not fulfilled, and when the court was called at ten o'clock this morning Hon. A. G. McKay, K.C., began his address to the jury. This address was a wonderful summary of the evidence, and was concluded at 11:30. It was followed by the summary of the case for the defence, delivered by J. W. Heffernan.

After defining the difference between murder and manslaughter, Mr. Justice Ives said to the jury, "If Helmbolt believed, as he said, that his wife was in danger, and if you believe him, he was justified in protecting her life, and if you believe the story to that point then you must acquit him."

Speaking of the evidence given by the accused, he said, "You judge a man's evidence as you estimate his character. In so far as Mrs. Helmbolt's evidence is concerned, the story of her weakness is not relative, except as you believe or disbelieve it."

Later on, speaking of the first letter written by Whiteside to Mrs. Helmbolt, which was written in Edmonton during the session of parliament, he said, "I have no doubt that it is entirely one of the cleverest documents that I have ever seen; it was devilish."

Later on, speaking of the evidence given by Fawcay, the star witness of the Crown, the judge said, "I have more respect for that woman, Mrs. Helmbolt, than I have for a man like Fawcay."

The statement by Whiteside, the dying declaration, also came in for some very keen criticism by the judge. Speaking of Whiteside's statement that he had an idea that Helmbolt wanted to see him because of a few "personal testimonials from Mrs. Helmbolt" which he had at the camp," the judge said, "I can't characterize that statement as in any way approaching a mistake on the part of Whiteside, and he knew the description given to be absolutely inapt and inaccurate."

Referring again to the dying declaration, his honor said Whiteside's desire to see Mr. Fawcay only arose after he had put on his shoes to go long and when he came back he said that Whiteside was coming over and was bringing the letters with him. "I told him that the letters would show him plainly enough that there had been something wrong between us," said the witness. She had started to tell the story of the details when she heard Whiteside coming. The witness was sitting at the switchboard of the telephone exchange when she heard Whiteside enter the dining room.

"I suppose you know what I want to talk about," witness quoted Helmbolt as saying to Whiteside. ROLL OF HONOR

Several thousand officers and employees of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company enlisted for active military duty with the Canadian Expeditionary Force, and the majority of them are now in Europe, bravely battling for Canada and the Empire. As particulars of Army Reservists are not available, these lists of those who have given up their lives for their country or been wounded in action are necessarily incomplete, and do not therefore indicate fully the extent to which the Company's officers and employees have participated in the great struggle.

Here is the Most Practical Washing Machine Made—Exactly What You Have Always Wanted.

The Maytag Multi-Motor Washer

Complete with Engine and Swinging Wringer

It is equipped with a light, powerful, compact little engine that does all the hard work of washing and wringing, and does a bigger, better, and cleaner washing in an hour or two than you can possibly do with a wash board and tub in a day's time.

This washer takes up no more room than an ordinary wash tub and can be used in the kitchen, laundry, dining room, on the porch or out in the yard. It requires no belts, chains or pulleys, no electricity or water power and no waiting for the men to bring their engine from the barn.

Besides running the washer and wringer, the machine is equipped with pulleys so you can operate other small machinery such as churn, sewing machine, food chopper or anything else that does not require more than one-half horse power.

THE MAYTAG MULTI-MOTOR WASHER is splendidly made of the best materials and is guaranteed against defects for a period of five years and this warranty covers the washer, wringer and engine.

It is not an ordinary washing machine, but something new, with exclusive patented features that no other washer has or can have.

WASH-DAY and that is WORK-DAY, changed into PLAY-DAY.

Good-bye backache, headache, nerve wreck! No woman need send out the wash tub as her grandmother's did, nor turn the old-style washer as her mother did, if she has a MAYTAG MULTI-MOTOR.

Nearly FIVE HUNDRED of the Wide Awake, Up-to-date, Progressive Hardware and Implement Dealers in Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta are selling this machine.
